

The Things We Carry: David – The Burden of Deep Moral Sin
GTW Online
Wednesday, October 7, 2020
GoToMeeting 4:30 – 5:15 pm
Teacher: Junior McGarrahan

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT**

We are going to try to simply our post-class discussion this week. As an experiment, we will not adjourn to Zoom. Instead, we will continue on GoToMeeting. At the end of the teaching session, feel free to leave the meeting by clicking on the Leave button. I will make sure everyone is muted so that we will have little background sound. If you wish to ask a question or make a comment, just unmute yourself and speak. After speaking, mute yourself again.

Week 5: David

4. David's Response:
5. What Does Transformation Look Like?

For Further Consideration: DreamWorks released a delightful movie in 1998 entitled Prince of Egypt. It is an animated retelling of the Moses/Exodus story that is fairly faithful to the biblical story. The music is quite good, and you might find yourself humming some of it or wanting to sing along. It is available for purchase on Amazon. Amazon Prime members can rent it for $3.99. DreamWorks, after the success of Prince of Egypt made another animated film entitled Joseph King of Dreams. Again, this is fairly faithful, so somewhat condensed. I wish it had included the actual line "You meant it for evil, but God meant it for good." They did, however, get that idea across and as the film dealt with the act of forgiveness it really showed the pain Joseph suffered because of his brothers' betrayal.
